CALIFORNIA'S MASTER PLAN FOR CAREER EDUCATION

2025

- Sacramento Regional K-16 Collaborative featured in the Governor's Master Plan for Career Education
- One of two K-16 Collaboratives highlighted in the Master Plan
- Data sharing project serving as a model for California
- Aligns with Cradle to Career data system

The Sacramento Regional K-16 Education Collaborative is building education pathways in sectors such as health care, computer science, and engineering. This effort focuses on learners at many different stages of life, from high school students who are taking college courses ("dual enrollment") to community college students who are seeking to transfer and earn a bachelor's degree to adults who started but did not complete their educational objectives. To support stronger communication between TK-12 and college partners, members of the collaborative have agreed to share information about their students, including course-taking histories and their contact information.

This individual-level data will help institutions provide more targeted outreach, identify reasons for missed enrollment, and support advising on academic opportunities. Information will be made available to educators through dashboards, as well as to researchers to conduct studies, and will complement information that is being compiled in the C2C analytical data set.⁴⁸ The data-sharing agreement will provide a strong foundation for regional efforts to support career pathways in other strategic sectors, while ensuring educators can provide the types of supports that are appropriate to different learners.
